

WASHINGTON CREDIT UNIONS YOUR FINANCIAL EDUCATION PARTNERS

SAVING FOR A RAINY DAY

805,000

savings accounts open in Washington credit unions

$1.5 BILLION

saved in Washington credit union members'
savings accounts

151,000

children's savings accounts open in Washington credit unions

$45.5 MILLION

saved in children's savings accounts in Washington credit unions

15,000

prize-linked savings accounts open in Washington credit unions

$2.8 MILLION

saved in Prize-Linked Savings Accounts

As not-for-profit cooperatives, credit unions don't pay stockholders on Wall Street. Instead, they reinvest in their members on Main Street, meaning they can pay higher returns on savings accounts. Through credit union-provided financial education, Washingtonians are developing good savings habits that help them through emergencies, take vacations, pay for education, and plan for necessities, such as long-term care.

Washington's 84 credit unions are helping their 4.3 million members build brighter financial futures. As not-for-profit cooperatives, credit unions are fully invested in financial education, helping consumers learn to manage their money, borrow responsibly, and save for the future.

FINANCIAL EDUCATION

94,278

Washingtonians

76,287

K-12 Students

17,991

Adults

Received Financial Education from a Credit Union

25,251

Hours of Financial Education Training Contributed by Credit Union Employees

From classrooms to community centers, credit union employees provide free financial education to Washingtonians. Whether it's at a Financial Reality Fair, where students learn real-life budgeting lessons, or at a workshop to help adults prepare for retirement, credit unions are empowering Washingtonians to be smarter about their money.

Financial Accountability

Credit
Building

Budgeting and Savings

Joe Adamack
VP, Legislative Affairs for Washington
Direct: 253.709.7921
Toll Free: 800.995.9064 x102
jadamack@nwcua.org

Jennifer Wagner
EVP, Chief Advocacy Officer
Direct: 503.350.2224
Toll Free: 800.995.9064 x 224
jwagner@nwcua.org

